This course is designed to acquaint the entry level substance abuse prevention professional with the ethical standards established by the IC&RC Standards. Participants will be provided with the Prevention Code of Ethics and use this code to demonstrate knowledge of the standards in case studies. Participants will become familiar with a decision making model that can be helpful when facing ethical dilemmas. This session provides the required six hours of ethics training for certification or re-certification. Participants will have a week to complete all requirements for this self-paced course.
